New York, Sept. 4.—E. P. Eastwick, fr., president of the Eastwick Engineering company of this city. in an interview explained the condition of his sister, Miss Marie Jo3cphine Eastwick, now under arrest in London under a charge of forgery involving $500,000. Mr. Eastwick said:
"My sister suffered from typhoid fever about four years ago and while at no time was her life in danger her illness was a protracted one, with peuliar effects on her mental powers. As soon as she was able to be out she showed an abnormal desire for outdoor e.ercise, and especially horseback riding and driving. Always a good horsewoman, she was encouraged, in the hope that the recreation would benefit her, but she carried it to such an extent that finally she had to be restrained.
"She was induced to enter a sanitar-other retreat in Connecticut, where one of the most eminent specialists of the country could watch her. When the was released from there we were essured that though she would continue to have vagaries which might annoy us, she was harmless. Soon after that my father took her to Europe, and has been with her almost constantly."

Mr. Eastwick denied that his father and sister ever had become estranged. She did leave a home several times, but always, he said, with the full consent of her father, and almost always to visit relatives.

"The ordinary person does not realize how much business is affected by the strike," said L. H. Smith at the Knutsford. Mr. Smith represents one of the leading New York jewelry houses. "I have been having it impressed on me thoroughly," he went on "because I sell goods in several steel towns. Pittsburg, for example, is one of the most prosperous cities in the country and one of the best cities to sell jewelry in. The merchants saw this coming and they cut off all buying orders. That meant several thousand dollars to my house alone, to say nothing of firms in this and every other line of business.

"In Joliet, His., it was much the same. I lost one order of $2,000 because the merchants knew this strike was coming on. I know of a dry goods house there which gave an order contingent on the strike being declared, and later canceled it. That meant several times $2,000. It is this way all over wherever there are from or steel works. When you come to compute the loss of wages and the losses to the owners of the milk, as well as the possible loss of life in case of riots, it brings out forcibly the tremendous responsibility a man takes upon himself when he declared a strike. "This admirable natural retreat is a set overitable Garden of Eden. Within this in walled fortress lies one of the most charmingly picturesque and fertile valleys of the west. Through the center runs a silvery stream with numerous branches, along which are situated some very fine ranches. The valley of the thole-in-the-Wall contains a population of probably some fifty souls. The men residing there, some of whom are married and have families, took refuge therein at the time of the ruster war, it and while they have never done anything worse than to steal cattle, they are in active sympathy with the Curried and while they have never done anything worse than to steal cattle, they are in active sympathy with the Curried and have large herds of cattle.

"It is less than fifteen years since the Hole-in-the-Wall first attracted public attention and it was not until the famous rustler war of Wyoming that it became the rendezvous of cattle thieves and brigands and the abiding habitat of some of their sympathizers. and brigands and the abiding habitat of some of their sympathizers. This war started in 1890, being the hottest around Buffalo, Wyo., and was precipitated by the big cattlemen themselves. It is related that the big outfits, in their annual roundups, were in the habit of gathering in everything they came across and that the small outfits found it impossible to get a fair shake. Then began a systematic system of thieving and finally the toughest of those who had gotten their start with a good bull and hot branding iron organized and broke into the roundup. organized and broke into the roundup took their brands therefrom and drove off the mavericks.

The blacklisted men, some of whom had been working as cowpunchers for the big outfits, couldn't get employment any more and couldn't get emplo small owners and made it impossible cowpunchers for the big outifts, couldn't get employment any more and big thieving took the place of petty larceny. Thus were men made outlaws through force of circumstances.

"The leaders of this war on the part of the cowpunchers and small owners were George Currie and a companion named Bell. These were ably assisted by Currie's two brothers and the Roberts boys, Frank and Tom, said to be brothers and also cousins of the Currie boys. They subsequently adopted the aliases of Jones and are now more generally known as Kid Currie and the Lonebaugh, and these five, together with Tom O'Day and Walter Putney, formed the original Hole-in-the-Wall gang, they being subsequently reinforced by other but less dangerous cowpunchers.

formed the original Hole-in-the-Wall gang, they being subsequently reinforced by other but less dangerous cowpunchers.

"The gang, upon the breaking out of the rustler war, captured a Hotchkiss gun in 1891 from a company of soldiers near Buffalo, Wyo., and retreated with the cannon into the Hole-in-the-Wall, where they planted it in the mountains overlooking the eastern entrance to the natural rendezvous, and it is the general impression that this huge piece of artillery is still kept in constant readiness in case of emergency.

"The gang found cattle and horse stealing a rather tame pastime and they gradually graduated into thoroughbred bandits, fearless for themselves and careless alike of other human life. Their first exploit in the way of bank robbery found it consummation in the little town of Belle Fourche, S. D. This affair took place in 1897, and was participated in by Tom O'Day, Walter Putney and the two Roberts boys. It was a daylight robbery and resulted in the loss to the bank of several thousand dollars and the immediate capture of Tom O'Day. The other three robbers got away. They took to the mountains of the Big Horn range and laid low for some time, conceiving a similar raid on the Carbon County bank at Thed Lodge, Mont. In the meantime they were joined by George Currie and three pilgrim desperadoes. Putney and the Roberts boys, in company with one other man. rode into Red Lodge in broad daylight, leaving Currie and two men at Mud Springs, twenty-five miles southeast of the city, in the Bad lands, with a relay of thirty head of horses. Upon arriving in the city the gang were seen and recognized by City Marshal Byron St. Clair, who used to know them in Wyoming. The outlaws told St. Clair their mission in Red Lodge, and said: 'We're going to hold up the bank at 7 o'clock tonight and you had better go fishing.' Instead of doing this, however, St. Clair, proceeded to the bank and informed Cashier B. E. Vaill what he had learned. St. Clair then returned to the gang and told them that their presence in
